Thank you for letting me try an e-mail. I've experimented, and I should be able to send a copy of the manuscript (prepared in AppleWorks) to you in a pdf format. That document is 1MB. (My cover letter and title page is attached, to see if you can open those in pdf.) However, you wouldn't be able to edit the text in that format; it would require being printed out. If I put the manuscript onto a CD, it would have to be in the same format, and I assume that wouldn't be editable either. Considering you asked for a paper copy anyway, would an uneditable e-mail version be acceptable? Otherwise, I will arrange for the manuscript to be printed out and mailed to you. Please let me know.

Re: "The CI Desk: Counterintelligence from FBI and CIA Headquarters Cubicles" by Christopher Lynch

Dear Pre-Publication Review Office,

Thank you for your December 5, 2007 response to my manuscript submission of February 2, 2007, which I received on December 21, 2007.

I am submitting this as a request for reconsideration of deletions contained in your letter.

*Amended Document
As noted in paragraph 4(D) and in many other paragraphs below, sources I have mentioned and their operational relationships have been declassified by the FBI, and are in the public domain, including, as cited, the FBI's own website. Your letter describes this is "sensitive information," but many of the basic details are no longer classified, and I request that these entries be reevaluated in light of the FBI's description of them on its public website, and FBI personnel's cooperation with other reportorial sources. Classified portions regarding these sources, including the use of a code name rather than the published true name, will be deleted.

In several cases, you have deleted the names of people and places in the text. However, I repeatedly found the same names later deemed acceptable in other portions of the text. Several examples come immediately to mind: Diane (LNU) (I used only first names if the person's FBI employment was not in the public record), [redacted] (LNU), [redacted] Rob Lynch, Jim Milburn, [redacted] and Norfolk. I can only assume the names themselves were acceptable, but you omitted text in which they were used in a classified context, and I am treating your edits accordingly, restoring names as I sanitize texts. Since I had to make repeated judgments calls trying to discern your intent, please let me know if the names themselves are not acceptable, since I would like to receive consistent guidance on their use.

b7E -7

The numbers below refer to the paragraphs in your letter, and the page on which the text to which the paragraph refers begins. At times, your page references do not match my original manuscript, but I was usually able to figure out your intentions. If this wasn't the case, I have said so below.

4 (p. 35). With this seven page deletion, there are some sections I would like to have restored.

(A) The first full paragraph on page 37 is largely a summary of a published book. I would like to restore the description of the book, and to provide an edited version of the FBI's reaction to it, omitting the next two paragraphs describing our review of FBI files if those are considered sensitive. OK

Bulky Enclosures

259A-HQ-L 1599267-355

PREPUB-4208

42-43
39
(B) The first paragraph on page 38 provides an anecdote regarding James Angleton. I do not believe the paragraph contains sensitive information, and with the exception of the comment that [redacted] and I would like the remainder of the text restored. OK b7E -6

43/39-40
(C) The next paragraph on page 38 describes a magazine article, our office's attempt to purchase the magazine, and non-sensitive commentary. I would like to have this paragraph restored; alternately, I would ask for more precise editing of what you have decided is sensitive. OK

40-41
(D) The remainder of this deletion regards Boris Yuzhin. The following text (<http://www.fbi.gov/pressrel/pressrel01/affidavit.pdf>), from the affidavit in support of the arrest of Robert Hanssen, is contained in the FBI's official website: "Boris Nikolayevich Yuzhin was a KGB Line PR officer assigned to San Francisco under cover as a student from 1975 to 1976, and then as a TASS correspondent from 1978 to 1982. The FBI recruited him to serve as an agent-in-place, and debriefed him. After returning to the Soviet Union, Yuzhin became the subject of an internal KGB investigation. Yuzhin was compromised to the KGB by Ames in June 1985 and by "B" in October 1985. Based in part on the information "B" gave the KGB, Yuzhin was arrested in December 1986, convicted of espionage, and sentenced to serve 15 years in prison. In 1992, he was released under a general grant of amnesty to political prisoners, and subsequently emigrated to the United States." In addition, Yuzhin has testified in open court an espionage case in Tampa, Florida as an expert on the KGB (US vs George Trofimoff), has granted interviews about his experiences working with the FBI, and has been discussed in numerous books, including details sourced to FBI and CIA officers also subject to secrecy agreements. Since the FBI has declassified details of Yuzhin's background and cooperation with the FBI, I would like my initial description of him, and several subsequent references to him that don't include unique information, such as the fact that FBI HQS had meetings concerning him, restored. I can describe him by true name, rather than the code name I have used, or cite published sources that use his FBI or CIA code name, if you prefer. I will address other specific details regarding him separately. OK

46/42
5 (p. 42). Colin is a CIA officer; his affiliation has been described in several books, and he has appeared on television using his full true name, discussing his CIA activities. As you know, the CIA has also reviewed this manuscript. They had no objection to describing Colin by first name, and did not redact references to him. I would like to be able to describe him by his first name. OK

18 (p. 62). Diane's last name is not used, and the information contained is not sensitive. She is a friend of mine and is aware her first name is used in my text. The information that she took a pay cut or previously worked in Identification Division is not classified or treated as private, and has been openly discussed outside the workplace. OK

19 (p. 62). Rob Lynch died nearly 20 years ago, and I had discussed his work experiences with him outside the workplace. His Army employment was not sensitive. I would like to restore the references to both Rob and Diane, or receive guidance on what third party privacy is at issue, since I am sharing information I received in personal conversations. OK

20 (p. 63). The agent is not named. It is well known that every company and organization is able to track long distance calls from its facilities, so this capability is not unique to the FBI or in any way sensitive. The locations cited are invented. I would like this paragraph to be restored. If necessary, I can point out that the specific locations cited are fictional, and delete the fact that the FBI did not have an arrangement in which individual long distance calls were not documented. OK

22 (p. 65). This lengthy deletion contains several sections that contain no sensitive information, including (A) the two paragraphs on page 67 discussing my master's degree program. I would OK like this text restored. (B) The portion on pages 68 and 69 discuss Boris Yuzhin being issued a camera, and then inadvertently photographing himself; this information has been discussed in the public domain, including in the New York Times article entitled "A Graying Onetime Double Agent Returns to Scenes of Old Intrigue" by Ralph Blumenthal, published July 17, 1994, which includes quotes from two identified FBI agents, James Fox and Bill Smits, both of whom were subject to secrecy agreements. "On another occasion, F.B.I. agents say, Mr. Yuzhin snapped photos with a miniature camera inside the local K.G.B. office, unaware that he was also photographing a reflection of himself in a mirror. That accident meant that his role as an American agent might now be known not only by his handlers in the highly compartmentalized world of counterintelligence but also by anyone who happened to gain access to the photos. It was an accident that may have led to Mr. Yuzhin's undoing: people familiar with Mr. Ames's debriefings by the F.B.I. say that at some point he apparently became aware of it." I would like my reference to this incident restored, minus sensitive details. I could also cite the article above.

24 (p. 74). Boris Yuzhin's loss of a lighter with a concealed camera is mentioned in several books and articles. Most notably, descriptions of this event are in Wise's book, Spy: The Inside Story of How the FBI's Robert Hanssen Betrayed America in which an identified FBI agent, Bill Smits, is quoted repeatedly (page 49 of the hardcover edition). The FBI agent is subject to a secrecy agreement. I would like portions of my description of this event restored, although I will delete unique details not previously published.

39 (p. 101). In the same document cited in paragraph 4(D) above, the FBI website contains the following description of Valeriy Martynov: "Valeriy Fedorovich Martynov was a KGB Line X officer assigned to the Soviet Embassy in Washington, D.C., from October 1980 to November 1985. In April 1982, the FBI recruited Martynov to serve as an agent-in-place, and he was debriefed jointly by the FBI and the CIA. Martynov was compromised to the KGB by Ames in June 1985 and by "B" in October 1985, as described above. Based in part on the information provided by "B", the KGB directed Martynov to return to Moscow in November 1985, ostensibly to accompany KGB officer Vitaliy Yurchenko, who was returning to the Soviet Union after his August 1985 defection to the United States. Upon arriving in Moscow on or about November 7, 1985, Martynov was arrested, and he was subsequently tried on espionage charges. Martynov was convicted and executed." Martynov has also been discussed in numerous books, including details sourced to FBI and CIA officers subject to secrecy agreements, and portrayed in movies. I would like to have the basic facts regarding Martynov which have been declassified by the FBI restored to my manuscript, while deleting the reference to another FBI employee's work. I will address other information regarding Martynov separately.

I agree

60 (p. 122). Although I do not object to deleting this name, I would like to point out that he is referred to by name and position four times in David Wise's book Spy, and is credited as one of the FBI personnel who helped Wise with the book. Wise's author's note makes it apparent that Houghton was introduced to him by the FBI. In this case, and several others, I used his full name only because it is already in the public domain.

65, 66, 67, 68, and 69 (p. 134). I am confused as to the intent of the deletions. I understand that you do not want the source identified, but the "optical scanner" is deleted when it first appears, yet "the scanner" is both deleted and accepted, and the description contains details that indicate what the scanner does, which is scan optically. The optical scanner is equipment that was purchased over twenty years ago, and, as the text indicates, was never deployed, so the information would not appear to be sensitive, and much information has remained intact. The final three edits on this topic are confusing: Their intention appears to be to eliminate the use of the source's name again, but they include innocuous details such as "more trips to Norfolk" and "said my goodbyes to Joe," both of which refer to previous text that had not been deleted. I would like the use of the term "optical scanner" either approved or denied, or an alternate term suggested, and restore the texts surrounding the source name. (Per earlier paragraphs, I would also like to restore the use of the source's name.)

72 (p. 152). There are references in the public domain to this subject, who is now apparently deceased. However, as a defector, he was the responsibility of the CIA. In the CIA's review, they suggested that I refer to him as "the defector" and retained much of the text, but expressed no objection to me using a pseudonym of my own creation to refer to him when I called asking clarification. I would like to restore references to him, deleting specific identifying information and using the name I invented. I agree

79 (p. 166). The fact of the surveillance and details regarding it are not deleted; only Martynov's identity is excluded. Given that the surveillance is acceptable, and that Martynov's cooperation with the FBI, and his subsequent death, have been put into the public record by the FBI, I would like the reference to Martynov in this paragraph restored. I agree

85 (p. 184). Except for the phrase regarding   memos I had written, this paragraph contains nothing sensitive, describing conversations with CIA employees, and only referring to an FBI agent who has been discussed before in the same context and whose name was not deleted then. The CIA did not object to any of this text. I would like this text restored, with the exception of the number of memos. The issue of the use of the source's name is addressed separately. I agree b7E -3

90 (p. 191). These deletions describe internal CIA comments on the FBI's work. While some specifics might be considered sensitive, I believe most of these two paragraphs' contents are innocuous and do not expose any interagency issues not already in the public domain. I would like to have these comments restored, with details only of the one specific operation deleted. OK

99 (p. 246). As mentioned in paragraph 22, the fact that the source had taken a photograph of himself is in the public domain. While the information that the KGB had the photograph has not previously been published, it turned out not to be true (see paragraph 105 below), since the original reporting was garbled. Inasmuch as the information was based on a false assumption, and was repudiated, I would hope it would not be considered sensitive, and I would like the text restored. OK

102 (p. 248). The fact of Yuzhin's imprisonment is public knowledge, and my reference to it cites as sources articles published in the press (the Russian press through FBIS, an Associated Press article, and a Washington Post article), and contains no classified information. In fact, I had no access to classified information with which to expand on the press comment. I would like this text to be restored. I agree

103 (p. 248). Yuzhin's involvement in an organization of political prisoners (identified in various press articles as "The Ark Project") is public knowledge, as it was contained in a FBIS translation of press articles at the time, and has subsequently appeared in other articles. He also appeared on the NBC Evening News of June 18, 1992, representing the Ark Project. In fact, I have no "inside" information on this organization or Yuzhin's involvement in it. I would like this text restored. OK

104 (p. 248). I don't understand to what this deletion is referring. No "fifth sentence" on this page or nearby pages appears to have sensitive information. Beginning at this point, your page count differs from that in my original manuscript to the point where it is sometimes difficult to identify your deletions without a copy of them as they appear in the manuscript, but I believe I have been able to spot what you intended except in this instance. Please explain which "fifth sentence" you are referring to. /

105 (p. 249). See paragraph 99 for a discussion of the photograph. I would like this sentence restored

OK

108 (p. 276). As was the case with Yuzhin and Martynov, Motorin is referred to in the same document on the FBI website as follows: "Sergey Mikhailovich Motorin was a KGB Line PR officer assigned to the Soviet Embassy in Washington D.C., from June 1980 to January 1985. In January 1983, the FBI recruited Motorin to serve as an agent-in-place, and he was debriefed by the FBI. Motorin returned to Moscow at the end of his tour of duty in January 1985. Motorin, like Martynov, was compromised to the KGB by Ames in June 1985 and by "B" in October 1985, as described above. Based in part on the information "B" gave the KGB, Motorin was arrested in November or December 1985, tried and convicted on espionage charges during the period of October- November 1986, and executed in February 1987." Much of my text in this paragraph is commentary on what had appeared in the press, is speculative, and is not based on classified documents or conversations. Yuzhin himself has given a different explanation in published interviews. I would like that portion not based on inside information or published in the open press to be restored, up to the point of the sentence beginning "We had seen over and over . . .", while including text to clarify that I am addressing comments that appeared in the press.

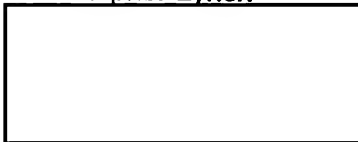

OK

It would have made it much easier to identify the deletions if a copy of the manuscript with the deleted text blocked out was included, and it would have been much simpler for you to describe the cuts, especially since your page numbering and mine diverged at some points. Please consider including copies of the pages with deleted text in your response to this letter, especially since I request less "broad brush" consideration of several cuts. I appreciate your consideration and look forward to your response.

Thank you,

My thoughts after my quick review of Chris Lynch book.

1. There is no problem with him using my name in his book. My name has been mentioned in numerous books and articles, including those written by former FBI and CIA officers or those sponsored by FBI and CIA. Moreover, FBI's public affairs office uses my name with newsmen and recently to talk to the Breach Movie people. Therefore, we could hardly tell Chris Lynch that he can't use the name.

Thanks, Jim Milburn

Dear [redacted]

b6 -1,-2,-3

It was good to talk with you on the telephone earlier today. To review our discussion, the Security Compliance Unit (SCU, where I am [redacted]) has reviewed the captioned matter. I talked with [redacted] and confirmed that Lynch had been employed at the CIA for [redacted] since he left the FBI in [redacted]

b7E -6

Since Lynch worked at the CIA after the FBI, it looks as if the CIA will need to handle any concerns [redacted] has about [redacted] information in the manuscript and removal of that information from Lynch's personal computer hard drive, etc. At the bottom of this e-mail message I have attached a copy of a part of an e-mail chain in which the Security Division AD addressed this issue. The pertinent passage is in red. By way of background, AD Phalen came to the FBI from the CIA and he just returned to the CIA this week as the head of all CIA Security Operations.

Finally, as a practical matter, the SCU does not have the authority to compel former employees to cooperate with the investigation and damage control of an information spill. We can only ask for voluntary cooperation.

b7E -6

If it turns out there is strong evidence to indicate Lynch obtained [redacted] information from his FBI employment, please let me know and I will review this matter again.

Regards,
